Travel Time Guide from main Airports and Ferry Ports to Fort William and Torlundy

Here are some guide travel times using your own or a rental car. Please note that the times do not take into account road / traffic / weather conditions. Fort William and Torlundy, sit on the A82 Glasgow to Inverness road. They also assume you do not stop to view the scenery or take refreshment. In the event this road is blocked by a traffic incident the diversions can be many miles so you need to take note of any roadside electronic information signs. You should also allow extra time if travelling in low light or night conditions and beware of deer on the road between Tyndrum and Glencoe. We advise against relying on the estimated arrival times given by Sat. Nav. and Google Maps as these can be somewhat inaccurate if you use the time given at your start point. They also assume you are familiar with the roads.

From Glasgow Airport - 100 miles - allow at least 3 hours. You may need more if you intend to stop and view Loch Lomond.

From Inverness Airport - 75 miles - allow at least 2.5 hours. You may need more if you intend to stop and view Loch Ness.

From Edinburgh Airport - 130 miles - allow at least 3.5 hours. You may need more if you stop to view the scenery.

From Aberdeen Airport - 150 miles - allow at least 3.75 hours, without stopping.

From Mallaig Ferry - 45 miles - allow 1.25 hours, without stopping.

From Uig on Skye - 123 miles - allow 3 hours, more in high season as the roads are always busy.

John O'Groats - 180 miles - allow 4.5 hours, more in high season.

Ullapool - 112 miles - allow at least 3 hours, more in high season.

It is useful to note that the A82 along with other trunk roads in the Highlands can be narrow in places and carry high volumes of traffic, especially in the main season of May to September.
